Probation Status Bring Review Of League Membership Standards

The Virginia High School League is an organization of the state accredited high schools. Membership in the League is by application and payment of dues set by the League Legislative Council each year.

The object of the League is to foster among the public high schools of Virginia a broad program of supervised competitions and school activities including athletic, forensic, dramatic, and literary events.

Membership in the League carries with it the responsibility to adhere to rules and regulations set by the member schools. These regulations have been developed over a period of 50 years by principals of high schools and establish standards for conduct and control of activities coming under the supervision of the League. League member schools and their individual and team representatives are required to observe and comply implicitly with both the spirit and letter of all League rules and regulations.

Administrative procedures have been established to investigate violations of the regulations and specific punishments have been established for schools found in violation of these regulations.

In addition to regulations adopted regarding eligibility of players and conduct of interscholastic meets, the League has adopted a Code for Interscholastic Athletics. The Code places specific responsibilities on the school's administrator, the spectator, the athlete, and the coach. County Land Brings 'Good Return' Says Assistant District Forester Smith, Taylor Complimented For Work

James Garner, assistant district forester, county supervisors and clerk look over report of progress in tree farming on the county-owned "Poor Farm" property in Cloverhill district. Sitting with Garner are district forester J.V. Jackson and chief forest warden David M. Smith. Garner reported that tree farming is profitable both for the county owned "poor farm" property in cloverhill District. He was introduced by J.V.Jackson, district forester, Va. Div. of Forestry.

The tract of land, 248 acres in all, on Route 632, serves as an example of "good forest management", said Garner, a special help when county forester Warren Taylor and chief forest warden David M. Smith talk with landowners about similar projects. In addition, said Garner, the income from wood cut so far, since 1967, is $4,036. Of this amount, Garner asked for and received approval to spend about $789 for seedlings, labor and other planning costs to reseed a section of the property with pine.

Thirty-eight acres of trees have been cut, he said, with 32 acres to be reforested with seedlings.

Plans made by Garner, Taylor and Smith also include the possibility of planting hardwood trees, to be preceded by a soil study to see if "quality hardwoods" can be grown on the property.

Garner said that every inch of the 258 acres is being well utilized or is being planned for in an overall productive development. Wet areas and sections overgrown with honeysuckle are left for wildlife refuge. Possibly the property can become a recreation area, he said.

He suggested that no timber be cut during 1970 -- that the property has been divided into six cutting compartments and that trees be sold each two years.

For reseeding the areas made ready by earlier controlled burning, Garner suggested 26,000 seedlings. Half of the cost of the seedlings will come as a gift from West Va. Pulp and Paper Co.

"We will do as much for the individual as we have for the county," said Garner. Both he and J. V. Jackson, district forester, Va. Division of Forestry, gave credit to county forester Warren Taylor and chief forest warden David M. Smith for tree planting help and promotion in the county.

"They have sold more seedlings per acre that they have to work with than anyone else in this district," he said. He added that small landowners (and 80% of all forest land is owned in the county by private owners) are "harder to sell on forestry" than large companies which have more resources for a program covering many years.

A question or two about Johnson grass was brought to the attention of resident engineer C. M. Clarke during their regular report to the supervisors. Supervisor John C. Cole termed Johnson grass "obnoxious stuff" and asked the highway department to see that crews make every effort when they are excavating ditches and moving dirt to avoid transporting Johnson grass roots to other sections of the county.

Like any other "householders", the supervisors are faced with matters of upkeep in the courthouse complex. This time, it's the furnace, and supervisors gave their approval to installation of regulators on the various radiators so that heat will be more evenly distributed.

Town Council Approves Budget

Appomattox Mayor H. B. Pack and town council treated Appomattox firemen and county and town officials to a steak dinner Monday evening at Maude's just prior to an end-of-year meeting to approve a budget for the coming year of approximately $90,000.

Councilman Ivey Holland, as chairman of the finance committee, presented a 1970 budget which reflects increases mainly in salaries for town workers, money for a new garbage truck chassis and funds for air-conditioning the offices and meeting rooms of the town hall.

Last year's budget was $89,925.

A complete run-down on the various budget items will be published in a forthcoming issue of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN. Motion to accept the new budget was made by Ivey Holland with a second by Dick Bass.

Mayor Pack, reporting on other town matters, said that major improvements planned for Court Street will undoubtedly call for large capital outlay on the part of the town to install up-to-date water and sewer lines while the widening and curb and gutter improvements are underway.

The mayor also informed council that two more notes of $5,000 (covering the next two years) will enable the town to retire its only indebtedness.

Council approved a motion made by Robert Hubbard, seconded by Mrs. Calvin Robinson that the Va. Dept. of Highways take over the road leading to the town - county sanitary fill from secondary road. This action will require a deed grant-

And The Word Was Made Flesh

"And the Word was made flesh." The members of Hebron Baptist Church invite you to enjoy this nativity scene erected as a reminder of the birth of our Lord. Recorded music is also provided between the hours of 7:30 and 9:00 p.m. This Christmas season, amid the bright lights and the paper tinsel, remember the real message of Christmas. Nearly two thousand years ago in the quiet of a Judean night, the God of Glory became a man, "He humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross," so that you and I might have eternal life in Him. It is our prayer that hearts might be open to receive Him, without whom no other gift is worth receiving. And so, because of Him, a Merry Christmas to you all.
